OREGON NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS ASSOCIATION

The Oregon Newspaper Publishers Association (ONPA) was founded in August 1887 by a group of 18 editors, publishers and newspaper workers to promote the passage of an effective libel law.

As a clearinghouse for information, ONPA serves both its members and the general public. Every year, the association distributes a wide range of materials regarding the journalism profession, advertising, newspaper management, and legal matters.

Through its government affairs program and lobbying efforts, ONPA follows political issues concerning the newspaper industry, particularly during regular and special sessions of the Oregon State Legislature. Freedom of information issues important to ONPA include public meetings, open records, public notices, cost of records, and electronic records issues. Equally important are business issues such as workers' compensation, independent contractor status, taxes, and advertising issues.

The foundation of a strong and successful organization is built from the labor of its members. ONPA relies on member volunteers to serve on its committees. Throughout the year, these volunteers work to achieve various goals that are set by the association's Board of Directors.

ONPA holds an annual publishers' convention and makes available other services, including an online employment page, a press release service, a legal hotline for members, online digital ad upload and delivery, and an informative web site.

Our Mission

To advance the common interests of Oregon newspapers and to further the public's understanding that strong newspapers are the cornerstone of a democratic society.

REAL ACCESS MEDIA PLACEMENT

Real Access Media Placement (RAMP) is the advertising arm of ONPA. RAMP helps media buyers plan budgets and place advertising in Oregon's newspapers, their websites, along with a full digital suite options. Working closely with other press associations, RAMP achieves nationwide reach. By making a single call to RAMP, advertisers can place advertising and find relief from costly, time-consuming paperwork and ad handling. This one call/one order/one bill service is available by calling 503-624-6397.

RAMP also places preprinted newspaper inserts as part of its display advertising service; coordinates a statewide classified advertising network; operates a statewide 2x2 display advertising program/ and functions as a clearinghouse for newspaper rates, digital buys, data and research.

OREGON NEWSPAPERS FOUNDATION

The Oregon Newspapers Foundation (ONF) was incorporated in 1978 to encourage the development of students and professionals in newspaper journalism and advertising in Oregon, and to assist in research for the newspaper industry.

Each year, the Foundation sponsors a number of regional journalism and advertising seminars and workshops designed especially for people working at Oregon newspapers. It also offers scholarships to college students who show an interest in working for Oregon newspapers.

The Foundation sponsors development events each year: a Symposium, which offers a variety of sessions in advertising, news/editorial, circulation, technology, and Newspaper In Education (NIE); Ad-Con, which is geared toward advertising sales and management; Collegiate Day, which offers journalism training for students involved in the production of college newspapers; and various other professional development workshops and seminars.

The Foundation also administers four editorial and advertising contests each year for ONPA newspapers. The contests include: The Better Newspaper Contest and the Best Ad Ideas Contest for regular ONPA members, the Associate Member Publications Contest, and the Collegiate Newspaper Contest.

The qualifications for ONPA General Press membership are essentially the same as those for a “newspaper” in ORS 193, the Oregon statute governing legal notice publication. All ONPA General member newspapers are therefore qualified to publish legal notices relevant to their cities, counties, and districts. Not all of the newspapers below qualify to publish notices, please contact the newspaper if you have questions about these qualifications.
